ried away bridges, ruined large crop sections, and put long stretches of the Lackawanna and Delaware & Hudson Railroad tracks under water.

Only one life is believed to have been lost, although many localities are isolated by broken telephone wires and reports are not available. George Davis, of Lisle, an aged man, just before the storm broke set out up the Dudley Creek after his cows. A few minutes later a dam above him broke, according to reports, and a wall of water swept down the valley, turning the streets of Lisle into torrents.

Among the villages most severely affected by the storm are:
Lisle, where the breaking of the dam and the overflowing of the Tioughnioga left half the town under water and in total darkness, with residents in one street marconed, so that they can be reached only by boats:

Purchasers of space in the co-operatively owned mortgage-free Park-Madison Building are buying at a price considerably less than they could possibly construct a building for themselves, by reason of the magnitude of the project.

The cost of materials, purchased on this huge scale, will be far less than in the case of a building of ordinary dimensions, in which it would be impossible to sell space for seven times the annual

A new building of this high character also insures the lowest possible maintenance cost. In old buildings the cost of maintenance is consider-

The Park-Madison Building will have the most modern equipment throughout. The elevators will be arranged in "banks" designed to provide maximum service at minimum cost. Building depreciation and maintenance cost in after years will be minimized by nicety of planning and close atten-tion to construction details in the beginning.

Based on my 25 years experience as a builder in N. Y. City, I do not foresee any substantial reduction in the price of materials or labor. I have, however, recently noted a general and progressive increase in efficiency and productive capacity of the labor forces employed in construction work

A millionaire's well ordered house provisions are stricted for the civilized would. Two women are naxions to marry the hero. One of them is a city bred parastic; the office will be received for the ready large with bow and arrows of her own manufacture, to find breakfasts in the nuning brooks and food in everything. Her only handicap is that she never had an education. Nature has been her sole preceptor. Health, good spirits, unflagging loyalty, a good figure, and an excellent complexion are all that she has been able to attain in the big school which holds its sessions under the open sky. The young man must choose between the two. And whom does he take? Since the action of the play hinges largely on the young man's quandary it does not seem to us just that we should tell. In the case of these mystery plays a critic should keep faith with the author.

He will find a good many amusing lines which will probably make him laugh even though they are all as carefully tended and planted as so many radishes. He will also be rewarded by radishes. He will also be rewarded by the humorous interpretation of the child of nature given by Miss Grace Valentine. He may even feel that the opportunity merely to look at Miss Valentine is enough. John Cope, as usual, revels in a rôle which permits him to be disagreeable to his heart's content. Madeleine Marshall is also excellent, as are Martha Mayo, Mark Smith and Grant Stewart.

Best of all, the play brings to hot and jaded Broadway a breath of the great woods, where the rank is but the guiea's stamp, the girl's the gowd for a' that

Only 67 in This County

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 .- Census of washing flow, aug. 18.—census of e least populous county in the county, Cochrane, Tex., was announced to-y by the Census Burcau. It has just xty-seven inhabitants. That is two sixty-seven innabitants. That is two more than enumerated ten years ago, making its growth slightly more than 3 per cent. Cook County, III., including the city of Chicago, probably is the most populous county in the country. Its population has not yet been announced, but is expected to exceed 2.500.000.

Cochrane is not the smallest county in the United States, as it has an area of 869 square miles. Its density of population, therefore, is one person to approximately every thirteen square miles. The county is located in Northwestern Texas, adjoining the New Mexico border. It is unorganized and hasn't even a postoffice.
